

Biography

KEVIN MCGUINNESS

Environmental Services Manager

As Environmental Services Manager, Kevin McGuinness is responsible for developing and implementing programs that maintain agency compliance with Federal and District environmental regulations pertaining to hazardous waste, air quality, water discharges, and pollution prevention. The Environmental Services Manager reports to the Chief Management Officer (CMO).

Biography

McGuinness joined GPO in November 2009 as the Environmental Services Manager bringing nearly twenty years of environmental program management experience from the United States Marine Corps, private sector, and civil service. Before joining the agency McGuinness was the Waste Management Division Supervisor at the Marine Corps Air Station Miramar, San Diego, CA where he was responsible for Station's compliance with hazardous waste regulations, pollution prevention initiatives, spill response, and environmental program awareness and training. After retiring from the Marine Corps in 1997, McGuinness worked for several years at a San Diego epoxy compounding company where he managed its environmental, safety, and transportation compliance programs. His primary focus has always been and continues to be regulatory compliance through pollution prevention and waste reduction. McGuinness holds a Master of Science Degree in Environmental Engineering from National University San Diego CA.